Ensuring Fair Access to NHS Dentistry

Like many across our community, I remain profoundly concerned about the ongoing challenges facing NHS dentistry in Montgomeryshire. In recent years, we have witnessed the loss of NHS dental contracts in both Newtown and Welshpool, resulting in periods where neither town has had a full-time NHS dentist. This has forced residents to travel unreasonable distances—sometimes up to two and a half hours round-trip—for even the most basic dental care. Such circumstances are simply unacceptable in the twenty-first century.

The Welsh Government has announced the introduction of a new dental contract, set to take effect in April 2026. This is the first significant overhaul of the system in two decades.

The existing model requires dentists to recall all patients every six months, regardless of clinical need.

Under the new contract, appointments will be based on individual oral health requirements. Patients in need of active treatment or support to maintain good oral health will be offered more frequent appointments, while those with healthy mouths will see their recall intervals extended in line with clinical guidance and risk assessment. Additionally, the reforms aim to prioritise prevention, establish greater fairness in payments, and simplify contract terms and patient charges.

While these changes are promising in principle, experience tells us that the reality in rural Montgomeryshire often falls short of government ambition. Press releases and consultation documents rarely capture the complexities of delivering care across sparsely populated and geographically isolated communities. There remains a real risk that these reforms could inadvertently widen inequalities, leaving rural areas behind.

Serious questions persist about how the reforms will address the practical challenges unique to rural Wales: increased travel times, low population density, infrastructure constraints, and the high operational costs of running clinics far from urban centres. Many dentists have expressed concerns that the new performance targets are untested and may expose practices to financial risk.

The British Dental Association has warned that some practices are already contemplating reducing their NHS commitment or withdrawing altogether, as they cannot to meet targets in areas where patients require more time and resources.

Rural communities like Montgomeryshire need more than well-intentioned policy statements. We need a transparent, time-bound plan from the Welsh Government. When will every resident in Montgomeryshire be able to access an NHS dentist in their own town or nearby locality, without facing long travel times and unnecessary expense?

When will the days of being told there is no service, or only extremely limited provision, finally come to an end.

It is not enough to simply adjust contract terms or patient charges.

The government must ensure these reforms include bespoke solutions for rural communities. Practical measures could include deploying mobile dental clinics, providing targeted incentives for dentists who serve remote areas, or introducing subsidies to offset the additional costs of running services far from larger population centres. Crucially, the new contract must be flexible enough to prevent rural clinics from being overwhelmed by unrealistic targets.

Ultimately, what matters to people is not the content of consultation documents, but the ability to access dental care close to home—without the burden of lengthy journeys or prohibitive costs. If this contract is to succeed in rural Wales, the government must turn rhetoric into meaningful action. Only then will rural communities feel genuinely included in future of NHS dentistry, rather than left behind once again.

Russell George MS / AS
Member of the Welsh Parliament for Montgomeryshire

It is a pleasure to have been invited to write a short message for the Llanfair Chronicle.

It was brilliant meeting with and answering questions from Llanfair Caereinion Town Councillors earlier this year.

It followed a wonderful trip on the railway, where I spoke with Steve and James and lots of the volunteers during a tour of the workshop, plus a constituent advice surgery at the Connections Visitor Centre.

Afterwards, I was shown around the Institute, taking a look at the soundboard and stage upstairs. As a former drama teacher, I was in my element.

I also attended the Victory in Europe Day service in May, and of course popped down for the day to watch the fantastic carnival.

Since my election, I have tried my hardest to be a bold, independent voice for towns like Llanfair Caereinion, and a committed backbencher who is not afraid to be a critical friend to the government when needed.

That is why I have loudly opposed the UK government's changes to APR, stood with tenant farmers against Powys's short-sighted farm estates firesale, and yes, welcomed a closer trading relationship with Welsh farmers' number one export market, the European Union.

That is why I voted to protect my disabled constituents against cruel benefit cuts, and that is why I have made my representation as transparent as possible, posting weekly updates of my work online, every single Friday afternoon.

My job is to be a representative for everyone in Montgomeryshire, so it is my ambition to meet with every single constituent who wants to meet me, before the end of this Parliament.

If you want to let me know about any problems in Llanfair, book yourself in for an advice surgery, or just introduce yourself, please get in touch by emailing steve.witherden.mp@parliament.uk, or calling 01938 739305.
